

Fundraising at work

'Last Friday Lotto' - sell lotto tickets to your colleagues, managers, suppliers and customers once a month. Split the proceeds 50/50 between the winner and One25.

Swear box - introduce a fine system for anyone in the office who swears. Suggest a donation of £1.25 (£1.25 for One-2-5) from the offender.

Cake sales - always go down well, and why not take a supply of our One25 Cake books to sell at the same time.

Christmas party - hold a raffle or an auction at your office Christmas party. Make a spectacle of it by using helium balloons to hold each raffle ticket and ask everyone to pop their balloon/s at the end of the night to see what they've won.

Jail and bail - set up a mock jail in a high profile area at work, such as the canteen or reception. Arrange for several unsuspecting managers or senior members of staff to be "arrested", served with a warrant and thrown into the jail. Issue them with internet access and a phone and allow them to make pledge calls to friends, relatives and co-workers to earn their bail. Make sure you have the permission of your overall boss!

End of week jukebox - charge people to play a tune of their choice in the office on Friday afternoon.
